

The relaxation of "rules" to allow even more concentration of media power in the hands of a few corporate megaliths is a potent threat to the flow of information in a free society. It is bad enough already when Disney or Viacom or (pick one of the three or so remaining names....General Electric) can control what we know, when we know it. Tom Paine would throw up at the prospects.